At Hutchison Ports, celebrating diversity is a cornerstone of fostering connection, understanding, and well-being across the network. This year, the vibrant and deeply meaningful traditions of 'Día de Muertos' provided a unique opportunity for employees in Mexico to come together, honour loved ones and celebrate life through culture and shared experiences.

Día de Muertos is a cherished Mexican holiday that blends indigenous and Spanish traditions, highlighting the belief in the spiritual connection between the living and those who have passed. Across Hutchison Ports' terminals in Mexico, employees embraced this cultural celebration, bringing its colours, traditions, and significance to life.

The festivities at Veracruz, Manzanillo, Lazaro Cardenas, Hidalgo and Ensenada brought the spirit of Día de Muertos to life through colourful altars adorned with flowers, candles, and traditional offerings. Employees embraced the holiday with heartfelt displays that blended local traditions, personal tributes, and communal celebrations, showcasing the rich cultural heritage of the region and the deep connections and bond to the ports and local community.

Through these shared experiences, Hutchison Ports Mexico demonstrated the strength of unity and the importance of respecting, preserving and honouring local traditions. As part of the group bewell initiative, these efforts go beyond celebration—it reaffirms the commitment to fostering a workplace where culture, diversity, and acceptance thrive.
